The slide may be a prepared, permanent slide purchased from a science supply company, or it may be a wet mount that is made for temporary use and made in the lab room. Other comments 20. M. 3. Learn the proper use of coarse and fine adjustments to focus. Clean your Part II slide and make a new wet montage with the magazine photo. The type of microscope we're going to use in this lab is a compound light microscope. While looking through the eyepiece, switch the microscope to low power. Learn the proper use of low and high power lenses. 4. Look at the picture in the magazine, starting with the power of light and scanning the picture. Explain. 2. Learn about the microscope 1. Concentrate on the lighter of the two hairs, using the fine adjustment knob. The compound term means that this microscope passes light through the sample and then through two different lenses. Remember that a microscope is an expensive and accurate instrument that must be handled with care. Connect the microscope to your lab desk. If you put a six to the left. Select a photo from a magazine that has several bright colors. The term microscope can be translated as "seeing the miniscule", because microscopes are used to study things that are too small to be easily observed by other methods.
